Introduction

- Key level is the main support and resistance in the indicator
- It can be used as a guidance that can tell us where the price might go
- The level can be used to place pending order
- As usual, key level is more reliable with the presence of other support and resistance

Type of Key Levels

Type of Key Levels

- Big Round Number (BRN)
- Key Level 1
- Key Level 2
- Key Level 3
- Key Level 4
- Key Level 5

BRN & Key Level 1

- Price moves from one zone to another, BRN to BRN
- Between the BRN, Key Level 1 divides the zone into a few levels. In this zone, price move from Key Level 1 to Key Level 1
- In MDZ indicator, Key Level 1 that has round number is plotted as BRN. So, BRN is also similar with Key Level 1 (BRN = KL1)
- When price rejects those levels, the price has tendency to go back to their previous level
  - Reject at BRN, then will move to previous BRN / Key Level 1
  - Reject at Key Level 1, then will move to previous Key Level 1 / BRN
- When price breaks those levels successfully, the price tends to go to the next level

Key Level 2

- This level exists between Key Level 1 or BRN
- The level is second most important level to look for before price cycle of Key Level 1 to Key Level 1 complete
- Price that breaks Key Level 3 (after Key Level 1) and reach Key Level 2 indicates that price cycle of Key Level 1 to Key Level 1 has completed successfully
- Key Level 2 also give an early sign whether price will go to Key Level 1 or not

- Key Level 2 can be used to counter trade
- As usual, the presence of other support and resistance make it more reliable
- Usually, when price breaks Key Level 2, the price will go to next Key Level 1
  - You can hold your position until next Key Level 1
- When price rejects at Key Level 2, it tends to reverse back to previous Key Level 1
  - You should close your position

Key Level 3

- Key Level 3 is known as “doubtful” zone
- Key Level 3 can be used as a sign whether price will go to the new Key Level 1 cycle or not
- If price breaks Key Level 3 (after Key Level 1) and never return to that Key Level 1, then it is considered that the price has successfully move to a new cycle of Key Level 1
- If this happen, the price tends to move to the next Key Level 1
- If price rejects at Key Level 3 (after Key Level 1), the price tends to go back to Key Level 1

- There are two methods that can be used to trade Key Level 3

(a) Key Level 1 in the middle of Key Level 3
If price rejects at KL3, price tends to move to KL1

(b) Key Level 2 in the middle of Key Level 3
If price rejects at KL3, price tends to move to KL2
